As you might have noticed, we have an aversion to traveling north of the Hollywood Hills. Perhaps the stigma of Mulholland Drive persists in part because of the David Lynch flick by the same name, though we never finished said film, thus we can't say for certain. But we can say there is a good reason to venture toward Ventura Boulevard, other than the corporate entertainment day job, with the arrival of Face to Face, a spa worthy of any location.

This oasis in the heated microclimate of Studio City is situated in a gated strip mall community - since it is the Valley, girl. Once inside, though, you'll feel more Zen than glen, with minimalist décor of white, green and copper. The naturalist vibe continues with an Iderm Dermaculture facial treatment, a unique holistic approach to skin repair. The anti-aging, pro-hydrating process will help you save face all while still geographically located in the 818 (isn't it ironic?). Face to Face also offers botox, juvederm, and a full service hair salon. Your journey over the hill has never made you look so young.
